TRAVELING IN BRITTANY.

One Meets Generally With a Very Unwelcome Reception at a Cottage.

Call at a roadside cottage in Brittany and ask for food and a night's shelter, and the whole family will crowd into the door to obstruct your passage. Then they will silently and sullenly look you over. Whither from? Whither bound? If a foreigner, they are even shrewd enough to demand your passport. No vagabond, deserter nor ticket of leave man will they harbor. Finally assured you are none of these, they set about bargaining for the last sou they can wring from you. The food you are to get, to the very color of the coffee, is set powerfully against your money.

Their own poverty, their bewildering number of children, the lonely road to the nearest village inn, the fact that at the next cottage they would probably murder as well as take you in: all and much more is set forth to make your bargain a hard one.

So, too, the toothless old peasant hag mother, while eying you suspiciously, croons to her husband a running fire of objections to the arrangement, a few of which set you down to your face as a villainous spy, some wretch that has cheated the gibbet, and certainly no less than the thief of Breton horses who was caught and flogged at the last horse fair at La Folguet.

They are shrewd and canny, these simple folk, and they will make you very miserable until the price is set and paid down in hand, for they will not trust you with the sum until morning, lest your appearance belie your ability to pay; but, the lugubrious transaction once settled and a few sous scattered among the children, which are immediately snatched away and hidden in the farmer's strong box, the atmosphere suddenly changes.

You are the guest now. All the innkeeping politeness, suavity and attention of Paris itself are yours, and until you leave every soul in the cottage puts every other duty aside to minister unto your wants and comfort.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Penalty of Miserliness.

Of what value is it that our "gilded youths" have larger fortunes and consequently wider opportunities for social and intellectual enjoyment and advantage if they have not the culture of mind and heart which enables them to profit by their fortunes? Of what use has been the toiling and the moiling, the striving and delving, to amass riches for those who have not refinement of nature, good manners, good morals?

What happiness can it bring to the parents who in the evening of their days are compelled to see that while they have been paying close heed to their financial affairs, the sons and daughters for whose sakes they have stinted their own pleasures and stunted their own finest feelings have developed only into selfish, indolent, careless animals, to whom the possession of money means nothing better than big dinners and balls, magnificent dressing and lavish display?

Shall not such parents remember, when it is too late, that our largest interests are those of heart, mind and morals, that our smallest are those of material possessions?—Harper's Bazar.

Improving the Bee.

Among the many insects indispensable to man are the cochineal bug, the silkworm and the honey bee. To the latter Dr. Lamborn's attention has recently turned, doubtless with a view to bringing about the advent of the much talked of "coming bee." Although apiculture is the oldest economic pursuit, it is only within the last century that much scientific thought has been directed in the perfection of the stock. Much has been accomplished in the line of developing a gentler bee, but at the expense of other qualities. To evolve an ideal bee some points must be considered which have hitherto been overlooked. A combination of desirable points of various races and an elimination of objections must require much patience, time and money.—Entomological News.

The Public Ventilator.

The man was in the upper berth of a Pullman, and in the middle of the night he called up the porter.

"Here, porter," he said, "we want this car ventilated."

"Aw," growled the porter, "you newspaper men never give a man a rest."

"How did you know I was a newspaper man?" inquired the man, for he was indeed what the porter said.

"'Cause you're always wantin to ventilate somethin, boss," and the porter opened the window above the man and gave him a cold.—Detroit Free Press.

She Must Have Been Blind.

Colonel Yerger—Did you hear that Baron de Nogood has married a rich girl?

Judge Peterby—Isn't he blind in one eye and a pretty fast sort of a fellow about town?

"Yes, but as far as eyesight she is worse off than he is."

"How so?"

"Well, while he has lost one eye, she seems to have lost the use of both; otherwise she would never have married him."—Texas Siftings.

THE LITTLE GIRL AND THE CANDY.

Mrs. Calliper Tells the Colonel About an Interesting Incident.

"Jason," said Mrs. Calliper to her husband as they sat at dinner, "when I was coming back from Cometville the other day, after my visit to Mrs. Gratebar, the train boy went through the cars, as usual, with papers, magazines and candy, and when he was making the trip with the candy, he threw a package into the lap of a little girl who was sitting with her mother. They were nice looking people, but it seemed to me somehow as though they were very poor. I imagined that she was a widow and that she had to look out now for every penny. Well, the little girl picked up the candy package and looked at it all over and read what it said on it, and finally she said to her mother:

"'Mamma, can't I have this candy?'

"And her mother said softly:

"'No, dearie. I wish you could, but mamma can't spare the money.'

"The little girl didn't say a word more. She just held the package and kept it ready to hand to the train boy when he should come along. It was plain that merely to hold it was a pleasure.

"Sitting in the next seat back of the mother and her child was a woman who couldn't help hearing what had been said. She had of course kept quiet, but when she saw the little girl sitting there holding the candy she couldn't keep still any longer, and she leaned forward and said:

"'Madam, I don't wish to intrude but it would afford me great pleasure if you would permit me to buy the candy for the little girl.'

"Of course this was an intrusion Jason, but the mother couldn't fail to realize from the woman's voice and manner the spirit in which the offer was made, and I am glad to say that she accepted it with a smile and a pleasant 'I thank you,' and the little girl looked up, smiling, and said 'So do I.' And so you see, Jason the little girl got the candy after all."

"Yes, Cynthia," said Colonel Calliper, "and I think I could guess who the woman was that gave it to her.'

"Well," said Mrs. Calliper, "don't guess."—New York Sun.

How Asbestus Is Mined.

The uses to which asbestus is applied are so varied that the mining of the mineral has become quite an extensive industry. In the majority of mines the stone is blasted out, machine drills being used to bore the blast holes. The crude asbestus in the most modern plants is carried up an inclined railway to a stone crusher, where it is broken with the adhering rock into pieces not much over 1½ inches in size. From the crusher the ore drops on an inclined sieve, which is shaken continually by suitable machinery, the loose fiber and dust going directly to the cleaning and grading machines, while the larger pieces are dropped on a revolving table, where the worthless rock is removed by hand.

The larger pieces are still further crushed and sorted, the object being to procure a clean fiber free from dirt. The chief difficulty in this method of preparing the material lies in the fact that if asbestus is crushed with a considerable amount of stone until the latter is reduced to powder the long and most valuable part is partially destroyed, while if the stone is not entirely reduced before grading it a large amount of waste is the result.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Bound to Get an Answer.

Little Ellen's mother was very ill, and a neighbor came in to see her, bringing her little girl. Ellen tried to entertain the child by every means in her power, bringing in all her dolls, and finally every plaything she had. But it was of no use; she would not be enticed from her mother's side, nor would she speak. Then Ellen stopped and looked at her visitor and asked, "Is you mad at me?" Still the little girl's tongue was tied, and she would not answer. At last, Ellen's patience being exhausted, her temper arose, and promptly deciding that strong measures alone would answer she drew back and slapped the child on the cheek with all her might, exclaiming, "There, now, is you mad at me now?" It is needless to say there was an answer at last.—New York Tribune.

Cling Desperately to Life.

Cats, according to the old tradition, have nine lives, but they are not the only creatures that enjoy such a plurality. Infusoria have been dried and restored to life by moistening after remaining inert dust for 27 years, and the drying resuscitation has been successfully tried 11 times on one lot of rotifers. Frogs and many fishes suffer no injury from freezing solid, while in a few cases even warm blooded animals have been restored to life after apparent death from freezing.—New York Ledger.

Amusing the Children.

Mrs. McShantee (triumphantly)—I see ye are takin in washin again, Mrs. McProudee!

Mrs. McProudee (whose husband has lost a paying job)—Sure it's only to amuse th' childers. They wants th' windies covered wid steam so they can make pictures on them.—New York Weekly.

A Woman Buying Stamps.

"How many stamps do you sell for a quarter?" she said to the stamp clerk at the postoffice.

"Twenty-five 1-cent ones or 12 2-cent ones, ma'am."

"Don't you give back the odd cent change?"

"Certainly."

"Are they the Columbian stamps or the old kind?"

"I can give you either."

"Don't the old style ones come a little cheaper now?"

"No, ma'am."

"I thought they would. They're out of style, you know."

"The government receives them the same as the new ones in payment of postage, and many people prefer them."

"But their red color doesn't match some styles of envelopes."

"I can't help that."

"Couldn't you sell me a dozen of the old 2-cent ones for 15 cents?"

"No, ma'am."

"Couldn't you on Friday?"

"No, ma'am."

"But that's bargain day in the stores."

"Possibly, but not at the postoffice."

"When is your bargain day?"

"We don't have any."

"Not have any bargain day! Well, I never! And my husband told me the postoffice was run on business principles. Why, you don't know the first principles of business."—Harper's Bazar.

Funny Stories of Indian Students.

European history and law appear to offer sad stumbling blocks to the native students in the Indian colleges and schools. In one paper the question was to explain the sentence, "She (Queen Mary) was not only his wife, but his friend." The translator made the passage to run, "She was not only his wife, but the wife of all his friends!" Another student defined Salic law as "a law in France by which no man descended from the female sex was to get the French crown." The habeas corpus act was described as a very important act passed in 1628. It declared, said one student, "that the bread and wine taken at the Lord's supper is the real blood and body of Christ."

Another imagined the act of uniformity to be a law "that all soldiers should dress alike." Asked to explain the expression "a sponging house" another ventured upon the following wild guess, "In England there are many people who live by sponging on others, so there are houses in which some who are too lazy to work depend on others." The last example is that of an embryo political economist who on being asked to write a note on the poor law said: "The poor laws in 1601 were passed in Elizabeth's reign. They were that all fires in England were to be put out at 8 o'clock."—Deccan Budget.

Danger In a Barber Shop.

It is dangerous to get shaved by an inexpert, clumsy handed, negligent or groggy barber. It is dangerous to get shaved in any barber's shop in which the lather is not perfectly pure, or in which any of the tonsorial appliances are unclean. The man who would guard against danger ought to have a lather mug and brush for himself, ought not to let his face be touched by a sponge that is in general use and ought not to patronize a barber who will use the same towel for different customers.

We whisper these words here, not as knowledge for men of circumspection, but as a warning to negligent men, who throw away dull care when they get into a barber's chair. We assure them that there are doctors who can tell of the perils that may be encountered under the razor.—New York Sun.

Care of the Eyes.

Avoid all sudden changes between light and darkness. Never begin to read or write or sew for several minutes after coming from darkness to a bright light. Never read by twilight or moonlight or on a very cloudy day. Never read or sew directly in front of the light or window or door. It is best to have the light fall from above, obliquely over the left shoulder. Never sleep so that on first awaking the eyes shall open on the light of a window. Do not use the eyesight by light so scant that it requires an effort to discriminate.—National Educator.

When Going In to Dinner.

Going in to dinner the host leads the way with the lady he desires most to distinguish, and the hostess with the gentleman whom she intends seating at her right hand. It has been customary of late years for the gentlemen to find in their dressing room tiny envelopes containing cards upon which are written the names of the ladies whom they are expected to take in to dinner. It saves some trouble to the hostess, as each gentleman co-operates with her in finding his way to the lady designed for his special attention.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sad Associations.

Of the sad and awful associations that lurk in certain odors, who can bear to speak? No one who has bent in tearless agony above quiet hands folded over fading white roses. Or who—but there are some things even memory dare not recall.—Boston Commonwealth.

SONOMA, APRIL 1st, 1893.

H. H. GRANICK - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

A DISPATCH from Ottawa, Ontario, says there is a new phase of the treaty with France of importance to the wine producers of this State. The minister of finance announced in the house Tuesday that in reducing Canadian duties by throwing off 30 per cent ad valorem duty on non-sparkling wines Canada would not discriminate in favor of French wines, but simply lower the customs tariff generally. This will admit United States wines and certain fruits and nuts at greatly reduced duties.

ONE of the most interesting exhibits from California at the World's Fair will be that of the Union Iron Works of San Francisco. It will be in the nature of a complete model of the whole works and their contents, each object constructed of the same material as the origional and an exact counterpart in every detail, except that it will be in miniature. The exhibit will cover a space fifty feet square and will cost $15,000

SOME newspaper man started the report that "a Spokane girl kneads bread with her gloves on," whereupon another practical editor observed: "Well, so do we; we also need it with our shoes on, with our pants on, and in fact with all our clothes on—need it doggoned bad, and if our delinquents would pay up we would buy a whole bakeshop."

WOMEN will play a very important part in the municipal elections all over Kansas on April 4th. Reports from different cities show that the registration which closed Saturday night was remarkable for its heavy proportion of women. Thousands of them are now qualified.

EVERY country editor is acquainted with the fellow who takes papers as long as he can get them on credit, and then attempts to pay for them by writing on a postal card, "stop my paper." His meanness would make Judas Iscariot ashamed to be in his company.

A. C. PAULSELL, ex-member of the State Board of Harbor Commissioners, died at Stockton Monday night. He suffered from Bright's disease, and had been confined to his bed for several days.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address (enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) to DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., ENOSBURGH FALLS, VT. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomanal sale attests, over four million copies having been sold the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the "Treatise." This offer will remain open for only a short time.

Don't Take a Newspaper.

A certain farmer, whose name we have been requested not to mention, sold his load of pork last week at way down prices. It appears the man, although he could read English very well, was of an economical turn of mind and imagined he saw a considerable saving in not taking a paper. In consequence he was in the dark concerning the markets in general and dressed hogs in particular. Last year he got $4.50 for his pork, and on his coming to town the other day with his big load of dressed hogs, when a logger offered him $5, he at once accepted and sold his load at that price, when if he had proceeded a block or two farther he could have had $7.25 per 100. In this case this man lost $42 on his load, enough to keep him in papers 20 years.—Minnesota Live Stock Reporter.

COUNTY ITEMS.

L. J. Johnson of Petaluma has invented a tricyle propelled by a gasoline engine.

The Southern Pacific train ran of the track at Santa Rosa last Thursday morning.

A slight earthquake was felt in Santa Rosa at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday night. The vibration was from east to west, and the shock was of only a few seconds' duration.

A bold attempt was made to shanghai Henry Esteigo of Petaluma, in San Francisco, on Monday last. While in that city he put up at a sailor bording house. His room was entered about midnight by two men who presented revolvers at his head and informed him that he must go to sea and threatened to kill him if he refused. He dressed and was given a drink, and while they were discussing their plans he escaped unobserved through a rear door. From that on he was unconscious of his movements and reached Petaluma Wednesday, muddy, tired and ill. Physicians say he is bordering on insanity from the effects of the drug. He seems afraid of strangers and imagines some one is trying to annihilate him.

Quite a little excitement prevails in Petaluma owing to the finding of portions of a human skeleton imbedded in the mud on the bank of Petaluma Creek, back of the Mechanics' boarding house, a memorable place to the oldest inhabitant as the scene of brawls, fights and numerous shady transactions. J. Peddie, while digging for fish worms, came across a boot with a rusty spur attached, several opium tins and a counterfeit die. The boot crumbled away on being exposed to the air, leaving a partially petrified bone. An iron bar with a heavy knob on one end was also found. The rising of the tide prevented further search until Tuesday, when a human skull was found. The search will be continued. Old pioneers are racking their brains to remember the unexplained disappearance of some party in early days.

California Wines.

Notwithstanding the miserable weather throughout the eastern and southern states the market has held good during the first half of March and the manner in which orders are coming to the prominent shipping houses indicate that the early spring months will bring active business. Values are very firm and there is a general conviction among the trade that it is only a question of a few weeks when there will be an advance in prices all along the line. This conclusion is reached by reason of the facts, first, of a shortage in the product; second, the increased prices that are being paid for wines from first hands; and third, the heavy drain that is being made upon stocks. With these conditions, and prices hardening all the time, there is ample reason to expect an upward movement at an early date. Exports during February were of good volume, particularly by rail, the aggregate having been 1,509 cases and about 600,000 gallons. The sea shipments brought the total up to 3,074 cases and 868,704 gallons. This figure is not up to the total of February, 1892, but considering trade and climatic conditions it is quite satisfactory. The exports for this month are expected to be quite heavy.—Santa Rosa Democrat.

Mrs. Latiman of Yolo county arrived here Tuesday evening with several small children, says the Santa Rosa "Republican." She is the mother of fifteen children and was on her way to Occidental to take charge of her little home there. She was greatly surprised to hear upon arriving there that her brother had sold her place without her knowledge and left the country. She had to seek hospitality from a neighbor.

Preventing Future Misery.

If there is, in this vale of tears, a more prolific source of misery than the rheumatic twinge, we have yet to hear of it. People are born with a tendency to rheumatism, just as they are with one to consumption or to scrofula. Slight causes may develop this. As soon as the agonizing complaint manifests itself, recourse should be had to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks its further inroads and banishes the rheumatic poison from the system. This statement tallies exactly with the testimony of physicians who have employed this fine blood depurent in their private practice. There is also the amplest professional and general testimony as to the efficacy of the Bitters for malaria, liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, kidney trouble, nervousness and loss of appetite and flesh. After a wetting, whether followed by a cold or not, the Bitters is useful as a preventive of the initial attack of rheumatism.

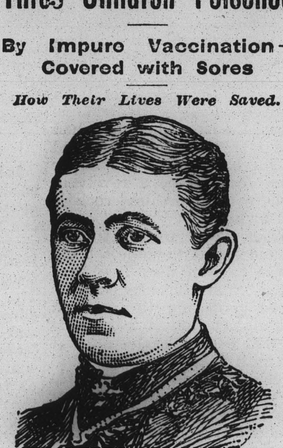
Three Children Poisoned

By Impure Vaccination—Covered with Sores

How Their Lives Were Saved.



Mrs. James Thrower
San Jose, Cal.

"When we were living in Chico, Cal., my three children, respectively 5, 7 and 10 years of age, were all in good health until they were vaccinated in January, and after that not one of them was well for months. They were all blood poisoned by impure matter used in vaccination. In August I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. They were covered with Sores From Head to Foot.

After they had taken the medicine for about a month, the eruptions healed, their appetites became natural, they slept well and commenced to gain in flesh. They have not had a sick day since. No children are more robust and healthy. My husband and myself believe we owe our children's lives to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

which we always keep in the house. I am only too glad to give this statement and I hope it will be the means of persuading other people to use medicine which I know to have so much merit as Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills." MRS. JAMES THROWER, San Jose, California.

Evidence of prosperity in any community is apparent in the prosperity of the newspapers published for the benefit of that community. Generous patronage of the newspapers not only indicates a healthy condition of local trade, but it also serves to strengthen and energize the public spirit, without which the the stimulus of business becomes apathetic and eventually dormant.

The residents of El Verano are up in arms against their local Poundmasters, who are known as No. One and No. Two. The other day No. One succeeded in catching and impounding a cow belonging to the village blacksmith of that interesting burg. The animal had accidentally strayed out of her usual pasture and had scarcely taken a mouthful of grass when the eager eye of the over-zealous Poundmaster caught sight of the offending "bossie" and he seized her as though his very bread and butter depended upon gathering in the stray stock of his neighbors. The result was that the village smithy went for that high public functionary in a way that was a caution.

THE DONAHUE RAILWAY.

It Has Been Formally Transferred to Messrs. Foster and Smith.

The San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad has been formally transferred to the Foster-Smith syndicate, who bought the 42,000 shares of stock, owned by the Donahue estate, on February 24th last, paying therefor $20.25 per share or $850,500. When the purchase was made the syndicate paid the cash sum of $85,050, or 10 per cent of the purchase price, and the remaining $765,450 was paid in certified checks on Thursday of last week.

After the transfer of the stock the old board of directors of the San Francisco and North Pacific held a meeting, and John F. Burgin, formerly president, Peter J. McGlynn, formerly general passenger and ticket agent, and Chas. F. Hanlon, formerly general counsel, resigned, and A. W. Foster, Sidney V. Smith and Andrew Markham were elected directors to fill the vacancies. Arthur W. Foster was then elected president and Sidney V. Smith general counsel. The board of directors is now as follows: Arthur W. Foster, Philip N. Lilienthal (who continues as vice-president), Sidney V. Smith, Andrew Markham, Alfred L. Seligman, Henry T. Scott and Russell J. Wilson.

It is probable there will be no other changes in the personnel of the company until the annual meeting of the directors which was to take place yesterday.

President Foster assured the press representatives that the road had been bought by home capital, and would be run by Californians for the best interests of the owners and the State.

THE SONOMA POSTOFFICE.

Mrs. Millie Bates Secures the Coveted Position.

The much mooted question as to who would be the lucky one among the numerous aspirants for the Postoffice of Sonoma, vice Miss Emma Hope, whose resignation was forwarded to the President last month, has been settled. A telegram from Washington, dated last Monday announces the appointment of Mrs. Millie Bates, widow of the late Theodore Bates, who was endorsed for the position by Hon. Robt. Howe. The new appointee will take possession of the office some time this month

Fined Ten Dollars.

Frank Martini assaulted Adam Adler for an imaginary wrong, at the Donahue railway depot last Sunday afternoon, and struck him several times with his fists. On the following day Adler had his assailant arrested on a charge of battery. Martini appeared before Judge Cheney and pleading guilty was fined $10. This is the second time within the past few months that Martini has plead guilty to a similar assault. It is the opinion of many, however, that he had great provocation in the first instance and had he stood trial he would have been acquitted. The last assault was entirely unprovoked.

The Chemical Works.

Mrs. Robt. C. Johnson of Buena Vista Park has subscribed $5000 toward the erection of chemical works in Sonoma. The subscriptions now amount to $20,000. It is now thought that the desired amount necessary to start the works will be raised.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fitzgerald (nee May Powell) will be sorry to hear of the death of their infant daughter, Madeline Marie, on the 18th inst. There is only one territory of any size, and never has been but one occupied by any considerable population, from which women are absolutely excluded. Yet such a place exists to-day and has existed for centuries. As far back as history reaches to all females this territory has been forbidden ground. This bachelor's Arcadia is situated on a bold plateau between the old peninsula of Acte, in the Grecian Archipelago, and the mainland. Here, in the midst of cultiavted fields and extensive woodlands dwell a monastic confederation of Greek Christians with twenty-three convents and numbering more than seven thousand souls and not one of the monasteries dates from a later time than the twelfth century. A few soldiers guard the borders of this anti-female land and no woman is allowed to cross the frontier.

The wife of Senator White of California is sometimes spoken of as a "Spanish beauty," and her dark hair and eyes and rich complexion seem to justify such a suspicion. But in the interest of accuracy a Washington paper declares that she was born in North Carolina and had a French father and Irish mother. She was educated in Philadelphia but went to California while a young woman.

Capt. and Mrs. H. E. Boyes have for their guests Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Oliver of England. In the language of the Woodland Mail, these are our sentiments: If somebody comes to visit you let us know; when they take their departure tell us about it; if anything happens in your vicinity manage to drop a hint of it into the ear of the reporter, he has an unfailing appetite for such diet, and never gets too much; if there's going to be a party at your house or at the house of your friend let us know; if you are to get married let us know; if you are going to build a house, going off on a vacation, going to start a bank or rob a hen roost let us know. We shall be pleased to put the news in the paper and your friends will be glad to hear of it. A newspaper is the composite product of a multitude of people each contributing a small share to the general result. It makes no difference whether you are a patron or not, our object is to give all the news and give it accurately. The brain of the reporter is merely a big hopper always ready to receive grists and grind them into news. Let us know if you know anythin g.

It is not generally known that tight shoes will affect the eyes. Yet this is so. When the feet are cramped and uncomfortable the nervous system is most susceptible to the influence of such discomfort, and this susceptibility is most likely to manifest itself after a time in pains about the head and eyes.

SONOMA HIGH SCHOOL.

It would repay one to visit the Sonoma High School. Remarkable progress has been made during the past year by the students, and Prof. Abshire, the principal, is both well-known and appreciated. The Trustees have supplied a long list of apparatus, which will be a great aid to the rapid advancement of the scholars. The cabinet, although small, contains some very good specimens, and it is to be regretted that there are no funds for purchasing a larger cabinet or to increase the collection. Therefore it can only be augmented by voluntary donations. We trust that all may add something to the collection, however small their contributions may be. The debating every Friday afternoon cannot fail to be productive of great benefit the students, enabling them, when called upon to speak, to do so in an easy and extemporaneous manner, also affording the very best mental exercise. We regret not being able to listen to all of the interesting debate on Friday of last week but what we did hear afforded us a truly mental treat. A better feeling is now manifested toward the High School by those of our people who strongly objected to it at first. All are now glad to see that it is flourishing, and they know that it will ultimately diffuse knowledge to all who will avail themselves of the opportunity. This High School will be the means of better fitting our boys and girls for a university course, for the home High School affords the student, be he rich or poor, the means of acquiring an education with a small outlay. The following physical and chemical apparatus are now in use and the reader may be interested in knowing what they are: Gage's air pump; mercury shower bath apparatus used with air pump; rubber gas bag, contents one gallon; palm or pulse glass to show expansion of liquids; Grenet's battery, four cells; telegraph apparatus; electric motor to show how electrical energy may be converted into mechanical energy; electro magnet; Leyden jar collecting electricity; electric discharger to discharge Leyden jar; galvanometer; induction coil; incandescent lamp; electrical apparatus to show arc light; pair metallic handles to take shock; apparatus to decompose water by electricity; floating battery; insulated stool; large horse shoe magnet; small beam balance; small bellows; small spring balance; small stethoscope; diapason and resonance box; small sand glass—fifteen minutes; glass model suction pump; glass model hydrostatic press; brass bell and king to show expansion of solids; circular disc to show center of gravity; set of pulleys—simple and compound; hydrometer for liquids heavier than water; hydrometer for liquids lighter than water; Geisler tube to show principle for aurora lights; test tube racks; tripod stands; still to distill liquids; solar microscope used in physics; botany, physiology and zoology—ten large images and project same on screen for class study; small sound telephone; Newton's color disc and rotating apparatus; reaction gas wheel; resonance jar; brass sounding plate: botanical receptacles; barometer; tube to show principle of Mariotti's law; glass prism; double convex and concave mirror; microscope presented to High School by Mr. Appleton; glassware consisting of siphons, tubes, florence flasks, retorts, funnels, test tubes, lenses, etc., etc.; rubber tubing, chemicals, etc., etc.

With the above the school will have access to a telescope recently purchased by Prof. Abshire in San Francisco. The telescope is 4 feet 2 inches long and 8 inches in circumference. It is mounted on a tripod stand which stands 6 feet from the ground. It magnifies fifty diameters and will afford some excellent views of the heavenly bodies.

SWEET RESURRECTION MORN.

Once more with joy we hail the dawn,
Of a fair Resurrection morn.

With heavenly hosts all o'er us filled with light,
We haste our praises to unite:

Our "Risen Saviour" now to meet,
And cast ourselves at His dear feet.

Pure are the lilies that we lay
Before him as we kneel to pray;

And grand the merry songs that rise
Triumphant to these Easter skies.

But as we worship and adore,
Oh! let us help Divine implore,

That far more prized than songs or flowers
May be these poor frail hearts of ours.

Hearts filled with heavenly love intense,
And gentlest thoughts of penitence.

Oh! may He with us e'er abide,
Who for us all was crucified.

And as he rose on that "Third Day,"
So may we cast our sins away,

And mount from depths of gloom and strife,
Up to a higher, nobler life.

A life by God's grace purified,
A life by good deeds sanctified;

So when we pass through that "dark vale"
Our hearts may tremble not, nor fail.

But greet with joy the glorious dawn,
Of heaven's Resurrection morn.

The "Changeable Rose" of Mongolia.

One of the achievements of the Chinese—the one on which they pride themselves above all others, unless it is the art of raising oaks in thimbles—is the "changeable rose," a real rose in everything except that it is white when in the shade and blood red as soon as the sunlight strikes it. The words "as soon" in the last sentence above do not literally mean instantaneously, but one thing is sure, the transformation is rapid enough for the wondering eyes that are allowed the rare pleasure of beholding such a wonderful sight.

After night, or when in a dark room, this curiosity of the rose family is a pure, waxy white blossom, the thick, succulent petals much reminding one of gigantic mandrake flowers, with the exception that even the stamens and pistils are of the same immaculate color.

When transferred to open air, the transformation immediately sets in, the time of the entire change of the flower from a livid whiteness to the most sanguine of all sanguine hues depending on the degree of sunlight and warmth. First the petals take on a kind of washed or faded blue color which rapidly changes to a very faint blush of pink. The pink gradually deepens in hue until you find that your lily white rose of an hour before is as red as the reddest peony that ever bloomed.—St. Louis Republic.

For Endowing Daughters.

In Germany when a girl is born her parents make her a member of a marriage association. The premium the father keeps up until the girl is old enough to contribute, if necessary, this premium out of her earnings. When she marries or comes of age, she is entitled to draw the entire amount of the premiums, with interest and any dividends that may have accrued. In England and Ireland the daughter's dowry is not a prevailing custom. In the middle class, however, not infrequently the father insures his life for the benefit of his daughters severally. This sum they may receive at his death, or by agreement when they come of age.

This form of insurance, it seems, is an endowment for girls that will appeal most readily to the American mind. Here, as in Germany, the contract made to run for a limited time, as when the girl marries or comes of age, would put it into definite shape and unlikely ever to become a burden. The American girl in her present alert state of mind and body would in any emergency be equal to keeping up the insurance if it should be necessary for her own benefit. Thus her father would be relieved of the responsibility of her future, and her husband, if she marries, one may hazard the guess, would not think of her the less for her prudent dowry.—New York Evening Sun.

Sound In Two Buildings.

The First Baptist church of Newburybort, Mass., a structure some 200 years old, has a wainscoting extending entirely around it from the choir loft to the opposite end of the church, directly over the pulpit, and by placing a watch on the wainscoting at either end it is possible to distinctly hear its ticking at the other end, a distance of 210 feet. The Beehive (Mormon temple) at Salt Lake City is exactly the shape of a beehive, only elongated. Here also one can distinctly hear an ordinary whisper from one end to the other, and Mme. Patti, who once sang there, declared it to be the most perfect building for singing in the world. In this case, however, the peculiar shape of the roof explains the carrying of the sounds so perfectly, but no such explanation is present in the Newburyport case.—Sylvester F. Deacon in New York Sun.

What He Was.

The drummer sat down to the feed on the table at a hotel, and he did not look as cheerful as some men look who sit down to some tables. The waiter brought in a glass of blue milk and a piece of beefsteak that looked like leather and set them down before the guest. Just then another drummer came in and took a place opposite the first one. They had been working the town together that day.

"By Jove, Jim," he exclaimed, "what's the matter with you? You look as if somebody had been imposing on you?"

Jim gazed sadly at the feast spread before him.

"That's it, Charlie," he murmured. "You see before you a man cowed by a glass of milk and bullied by a beefsteak," and Charlie ordered something else and got the same.—Detroit Free Press.

Little Things That Bother.

Perhaps you do not want your presence known and down goes your umbrella, or, still better, your scissors fall with a whack! Perhaps you make a beautiful cake and leave out the eggs and flour! You accost a stranger, mistaking him for a friend. You feel at peace with all mankind and a hand organ strikes up near by; you try to sew and your thread either has no knot or is all knots, and your thimble is too large; you stumble going up an aisle or ascending a platform; your hair comes out of curl when you want to look your best, and the terrible infant mentions a few incontrovertible but embarrassing facts in company.—Boston Commonwealth.

ODD MISTAKES OF NOVELISTS.

Writers of Thrilling Love Stories Often Get Mixed in Their Details.

The average reader who skims over the last railroad novel is not likely to notice the many faults in the flimsy construction of the plot.

But I often smile at the maidens that wander in "lonely woods" at unearthly hours of night, always clad in "a soft, white, clinging gown." Now every girl knows that the average maiden is too much afraid of tramps and snakes to wander in "lonely woods." And then she is not "pale, but unspeakably lovely," after such a tramp. No; an ordinary girl who spends half a night in a "mossy" but damp couch will wander home in the morning full of mud and cockle burs, her bangs as straight as a cable on an avenue car line and herself as cross as a Seventh street policeman on Saturday evening.

Another odd thing is the way some pen pushers get mixed in their weather reports. Some begin a chapter at dawn, there are a few moments' conversation, and then the "sun sets in lurid banks behind the distant, empurpled mountains."

There is one novel, by The Duchess, I think, in which the chapter opens with "a thick, drizzling mist sifting down and enfolding the landscape," and in a few moments the hero is springing out of a window into the "soft, mellow moonlight." Evidently the weather possessed as many phases as Marshall Wilder's transformation tableaux.

There is one song and it is a sweet one, too that furnishes a brilliant example. In "Alice, Where Art Thou?" one verse speaks of the "silver rain falling," while the first one announces that the "moon shines bright," and that "its rays tinge the forest." These seem, on ordinary occasions, slightly contradictory statements.

I have often wondered how long some girls could go sans meals, sans head, sans everything, for, judging by some of the writers, neither the hero nor the heroine is subject to any necessity of nature. Love is an excellent thing, a "pearl of great price." But a man in a dirty collar and no breakfast in his stomach doesn't feel like courting the girl who looks as limp as the man who bet his last dollar on Sullivan and went home to find his wife sick and the grocer's boy sitting on the stoop with a six months' bill.

The old fashioned novelist is played out; the old fashioned hero has been cremated, and the old fashioned heroine sits in lonely solitude, forgotten by the busy throng. The wasp waist, the lily flower that fainted at every breath has passed slowly away.

May she rest in peace! And in her place is the strong, healthy, rosy cheeked, independent girl, who can drive her horse and check her trunks with equal ease and fascinating grace. Blood and bounding health speak from every rounding curve, and the dainty, simpering, lackadaisical maiden of blushes, tremors and sighs dwells in innocuous desuetude, let us hope, forever.

There let her rest, by the side of the hero with the "short sword and dark, gloomy eyes," who rode about on a borrowed horse and whose only object was to disturb the peace of the commonwealth. Gone are the perfect heroes, the faultless heroines, and in their place reign men and women flesh and blood with the passions that sink them to the brute and elevate them to the divinity.—Washington Post.

Many Kinds of Monkeys.

The ordinary reader hardly realizes how many varieties of monkeys exist. We hear of monkeys in the Indies with reddish brown bodies, black heads and faces of a sky blue. There are monkeys with white eyelids, and green monkeys to be found on the African continent and Cape de Verde islands. The howlers, which inhabit South America, are large and fierce, and travelers describe their yells as absolutely appalling. So dreadful is the sound of their growlings and roarings that one would imagine that all the beasts of the forests had gathered together for a battle. These creatures are so fierce that even the most skillful and adventurous trainer is unwilling to teach them tricks.—Harper's Young People.

"August Flower"

Perhaps you do not believe these statements concerning Green's August Flower. Well, we can't make you. We can't force conviction into your head or medicine into your throat. We don't want to. The money is yours, and the misery is yours; and until you are willing to believe, and spend the one for the relief of the other, they will stay so. John H. Foster, 1122 Brown Street, Philadelphia, says: "My wife is a little Scotch woman, thirty years of age and of a naturally delicate disposition. For five or six years past she has been suffering from Dyspepsia. She became so bad at last that she could not sit down to a meal but she had to vomit it as soon as she had eaten it. Two bottles of your August Flower have cured her, after many doctors failed. She can now eat anything, and enjoy it; and as for Dyspepsia, she does not know that she ever had it." 69

My wife was troubled with nervousness about one year before she took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and at that time had very severe attacks of spasm, convulsion, and pains in different parts of the body; when in this state her lower jaws would act violently and set sometimes, bite her tongue, breathe heavily, then short, then seemed to stop entirely, get a wild look in her eyes and rolling around, then stop sometimes; it would take two men to hold her in bed; otherwise her body would cramp and be so for two hours. She took but two bottles of the Nerve Tonic, which cured her entirely of all these torments, which myself and wife gladly testify it truly had the desired effect D. S. M'GILLIS.
